The subscriptions towards the fund for the maintenance of the Corps have already passed the first thousand dollar mark, and now that the campaign against the diseases of the poor babies has actually begun, the dollars are expected to roll up faster yet.

The collection of $106 for the Fund by an American gentleman among the passengers on the big ocean steamship Matic is a pleasant instance, noted in another column, of practical sympathy in behalf of this charity.

THE WOMEN PACTORY INSPECTORS. Seven of the eight appointments of Female Factory Inspectors to be made der the new law have been announced by the State Factory Inspector.

The seven women appointed are indorsed as practical workingwomen themselves, and therefore as having a most comprehensive idea of the duties and responsibilities of their positions. This indorsement proving true, the work under the law is sure to be started in just the right way to show how wise and just is the new measure.

As a persistent and sanguine advocate of the law, THE EVENING WORLD looks ders, are most frequently chosen. These fidently to these appointees for the faithful carrying of its provisions towards the high and humane end for which it was designed, Exaggeration is not necessary in depicting the scenes which THE EVENING World's Corps of Physicians met with in their first detour of duty. The facts are too harrowing without varnishing.

A Young Girl Takes a Detroit Hotel by Storm. A handsomely attired and exceedingly pretty young woman came into the Russell House lobby yesterday afternoon and walked up the counter with easy self-possession. The clorks were instantly attention, says the Detroit Free Press. Withdrawing a card and pencil from a silver-mounted purse she wrote a few lines in a pretty feminine hand, placed her finger to her lips in a way which almost startled the aforesaid clerks out of their wite, and held out the card.

It was taken with fear and trembling, but only stated that she was duub, and requested permission to circulate a paper, which she held in her hand, among the quests who were scated about the lobby guests who were scated about the lobby and reading room.

"Certainly," wrote back the clerk with alacrity, his eyes at the same time carefully scrutinizing the proity face and handsome attire of the suppliant.

The paper stated that the young woman's name was Jennie flustiff and that she had lost the power of speech through a severe attack of iliness and would be thankful for enything which might be contributed to and her in reaching her friends, who were located at Davenport. In. She realized quite a large sum through the generosity of the occupants of the hotel lobby.

"Well, that beats me," claculated one of the guests, as her slim form vanished through the ponderous office doerway.
